Hampton Court Palace, the largest royal palace in Great Britain, was founded by Cardinal Wolsey in 1515 and afterwards presented by him to the King; it has not however been used as a royal residence since George II's time, having been utilized as a show place, a picture gallery, and a residence for the widows of officers and others who have distinguished themselves in the service of their country. On the east side of the palace are the beautiful Dutch gardens laid out by William and Mary.
